

Foes Predicting Sunshine Law's Defeat To-day

Campbell of Kansas Says That the House Will Override Wilson's Veto of Repeal by a Two-thirds Vote

Even Its Friends Fearful

Neither Mondell Nor Clark, Majority and Minority Leaders, Venture Forecast

WASHINGTON, July 13.—The House will attempt when it reconvenes tomorrow to override the President's veto of the agricultural appropriation bill with its rider repealing the daylight savings act.

Supporters of daylight saving were fearful to-night that the effort would succeed. Representative Philip Campbell, of Kansas, a leader in the fight for the original bill repealing the daylight law, said he was confident that more than two-thirds of the House would vote to-morrow to sustain the repeal.

If the veto is overridden in the House similar action by the Senate is almost certain to follow. The rider was tacked on the bill in the upper house by an overwhelming majority.

Friends of the sunshine law hope that some Democratic members who voted originally for the repeal can be induced to eschew themselves when the vote is taken to-morrow for the sake of the President's prestige. Republicans from the rural districts will vote as a unit to override the veto.

To-morrow's ballot will be the first that has been taken in many months upon an important measure, the result of which was not very definitely foretold by complete polls. Neither Majority Leader Mondell, nor Champ Clark, the minority leader, would venture a prediction to-night on the outcome.

Telegrams from the cities urging that the President's veto be sustained, and from the rural districts urging that it be overridden, were delivered by the hundreds in the House Office Building to-day. Messages from the friends of the law were far outnumbered by those of its opponents.

So far as the House leaders know the strength of the opposition before he sent his veto message. Had Democratic leaders been consulted they would have advised against the veto.

People Urged to Fight Daylight Law Repeal

Telegrams of Protest To-day to Senators and Representatives Are Advised by Ferguson

William A. Ferguson, secretary of the National Daylight Saving Association, issued a final appeal last night for speedy action by all who wish the daylight law retained.

"Efforts will be made to-morrow," said Mr. Ferguson, "to pass the agricultural appropriation bill, to which the repeal of daylight is a rider. We believe the opponents of daylight will not be able to raise the required two-thirds vote, but to make sure every one must help."

The most effective way to do this is to wire your particular Representative and your Senators to stand by the President.

New York State is officially on record for daylight saving, for by state law we have turned the clocks ahead one hour in New York. That shows the state as a whole wants daylight saving. Senators Wadsworth and Fawcett, of New York, voted to repeal the law. It should be advised by the voters when he is supposed to represent to uphold the President in his veto.

"Every one, therefore, who wants the daylight law retained should forward a protest by wire to-day to Senator Wadsworth and to Speaker Gillett, of the House of Representatives."

Senator Calder has informed me that a strong protest from the public will be headed. Let every one who can make this protest do so."

Income Tax Declared Not Unjust to Jersey

Attorney Says That State Has Surplus Built Upon Levies on Non-Resident Legatees

Joseph F. McCloy, an attorney, of 55 Pine Street, declared yesterday that New Jersey dwelt in a glass house so far as throwing stones at the New York State income tax was concerned. Residents of New Jersey who work in New York and are taxed upon their earnings here are no worse off, said Mr. McCloy, than New Yorkers inheriting New Jersey property whose late owner was not a resident of New Jersey.

"The New Jersey state treasury," he said, "has consistently reported a surplus for a number of years which can be directly traced to the operation of the New Jersey inheritance tax law as it affects non-resident decedent estates. That statute embodies a discriminatory provision particularly injurious to the estates of New Yorkers who are so unfortunate as to have invested in shares of New Jersey corporations during their lifetimes. "It operates likewise to discriminate against the non-resident owning personal property beyond the jurisdiction of New Jersey, as compared with the non-resident in like case owning no such property. The greater the value of the property beyond the jurisdiction the greater the tax due New Jersey, although the value of the property transferred in New Jersey under the statute is of the same value and similarly transferred in any case."

Hamby's End Draws Near

OSSINING, N. Y., July 13.—Gordon Fawcett Hamby, convicted of murder in connection with a bank robbery in Brooklyn, has until Saturday to reconsider his refusal to permit his attorney to take an appeal that would act as an automatic stay to the execution of the death sentence. He was sentenced to die during the week of July 28. If he does not change his mind about an appeal a lunacy commission will visit Sing Sing Saturday to examine him.

Giant Steamships Exchange Berths In Easy Fashion

Imperator Takes Leviathan's Place Very Soon After Latter Departs; Former Brings 9,452 Passengers

Sightseers along the water front were treated to an unusual spectacle yesterday when the two biggest steamships in the world exchanged berths at Pier 4, Hoboken, without mishap and in perfect accord with the plans the Navy Department had made for the shifting.

The Leviathan, the bigger vessel, backed out in the North River at 6:30 p. m. and, quickly straightening herself out, proceeded on her way to Brest. She had hardly pointed her stem down stream when the Imperator, which had gone up the river and turned, put her nose up to the dock and passed out her headlines. Within a half hour after the Leviathan had moved out the Imperator was in her place.

On the Imperator as a guest of this nation came Count Macchi de Cellere, Italian Ambassador, who had gone abroad several months ago to attend the peace conference in Paris. Accompanied by his wife and son and daughter, he left the vessel after a marine guard had played two ruffles and the national anthem of Italy. He and his family were "piped over the side" as they went ashore, accompanied by Captain Casey B. Morgan, commander of the Imperator, and Rear Admiral M. Lavetoli, of the Italian navy.

The Imperator's passenger complement consisted of 9,452 persons, including 400 casual officers, 650 nurses and 62 brides. The soldiers represented ninety military organizations of the A. E. F. The important units were the 304th and 182d Pioneer Infantry. On Wednesday at 6 p. m., when nearly all the saloon passengers were at dinner, a fire broke out on the boat deck and the ship was brought to a stop. Captain Morgan left the bridge and directed his fire brigade in fighting the flames, which blazed up as high as the funnels. The fire was started, it is thought, by a match or cigarette having been thrown into a stack of kopeck life preservers lashed to the boat deck. The flames burned the covers of several lifeboats, but that and the destruction of a few hundred life preservers was the extent of the damage.

In a separate compartment of the vessel used for express freight in peace times came five tons of carefully written records of American casualties of the war. They were put aboard under the supervision of Lieutenant Colonel Ernest G. Smith, of Wilkes-Barre, Penn., who accompanied them across the Atlantic and will arrange for their shipment to the adjutant general's office in Washington.

Business Men to Help Improve Postal Service

Merchants Here and in Other Large Cities to Co-operate With Department

At the invitation of the Postoffice Department, through the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, various commercial organizations in New York and other large cities are to undertake cooperation with the government in improving the postal service. The Merchants' Association of New York, which has been agitating improvement for a long time, characterizes the plan as an effort to "rehabilitate the post-office."

The plan, worked out at a conference between representatives of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States and assistants of Postmaster

General Burleson, calls for the establishment in Washington of a joint committee of commercial bodies which will work in harmony with the Postoffice Department.

Commercial organizations in every large mailing centre will also appoint committees on postal facilities, which will study their own particular problems and report to Washington their findings and recommendations. The Merchants' Association has joined the movement, but announces in the current issue of its publication, "Greater New York," that it is doubtful of the workability of a large joint committee. The association also announces that in accepting the scheme it reserves freedom of action when differences arise as to the practicability of various policies in the government mail service.

The association's committee includes William F. Morgan, chairman; George J. H. Folmer, Alfred Brooks Fry, Frank De K. Huyler, Robert E. Niese, J. Louis Schaefer, Philip L. Schell and William R. Wilcox.
